JUNE/2014

Welcome to ECAA's E-Newsletter, The Spark!

This e-newsletter was created to keep members informed on the Association's activities and upcoming events in a timely manner.

President's Message

Hello everyone. The 2014 ECAA AGM has come and gone leaving all who attended with great memories and fellowship. This year's event was held in Edmonton at the Fantasyland Hotel. The facilities and venue were very good. We saw record numbers for attendance at our second annual PEC Training Day, the awards luncheon, and the Presidents Gala. The AGM success is only possible with the amazing talent and commitment of Sheri and her team.

Darcy Teichroeb,
PEC

My term as President begins and I would like to thank Mr. Les Dzwonkiewicz for his strong leadership this past year and I look forward to continuing the work and commitments Les and our Board have made our association known for. I would like to welcome Mr. Eric Fadden to the executive board as our new Secretary.

The ECAA is in a strong state of affairs and is a strong representation of its members within the Electrical Industry today. Over the past 20 years I have been involved with the ECAA, I have watched industry passionate leaders in Past Presidents and Board Members, including the ECAA office staff, lead and build the ECAA to where it is today. The ECAA membership continues to diversify and grow. We need to acknowledge our accomplishments but stay focused on our commitments to membership and industry in order to continue our growth while sustaining our respected voice in the Industry.

I look forward to new challenges and working with our Board, our Members, and the ECAA Office Staff to support the success of the ECAA.

Darcy Teichroeb, PEC, CME
Provincial President

Silica Exposure Control Best Practices - Your Participation Requested

Alberta Construction Association is developing a best practice to protect construction workers from occupational exposure to silica. As reported previously, field testing of Alberta construction jobsites indicates that exposure above acceptable limits can occur on many different types of jobsites and many of the workers onsite. ACA strongly believes industry is in the best position to develop practical and effective solutions, rather than those created through regulation. To this end, ACA needs your leadership and ideas. The ad hoc committee has identified numerous construction processes and products that could generate exposure to silica. They are asking for knowledgeable and committed volunteers from a number of trades to join their work. We would welcome representation from trade associations to ensure we have the best ideas and can raise awareness as broadly as possible. The committee terms of reference are attached. Contact ken.gibson@albertaconstruction.net for further information.

May 6, 2014 - A general contractor and a licensed electrical contractor have both been convicted and fined for illegal electrical work done in several Ontario schools in the Ottawa, Kingston and Pembroke areas. On April 3, 2014, Ontario's Electrical Safety Authority (ESA) says Mario Giroux - owner of Construction G operating in the Ottawa area pleaded guilty to 13 counts of performing electrical work without an electrical contractor's licence, eight counts of failing to apply for inspection and one count of leaving an unsafe condition. Meantime, on April 24, Nick Medewar of NM Electric was convicted in an Ottawa court of six counts of illegally taking out electrical permits on behalf of an unlicensed contractor working for Construction G.

According to ESA, Construction G hired a worker who performed electrical work on its behalf but did not ensure this worker held the required electrical contractor licence. The worker subsequently arranged to have electrical permits taken out illegally by Medewar who is a licensed electrical contractor (LEC) for work at several schools of the Conseil Des Ecoles Catholiques du Centre-Est, and at least one residential site. That worker has been charged with doing electrical work without a licence, and this case is before the courts.

"This is an issue where multiple illegal actions put public safety-specifically children-at risk," said Normand Breton, ESA's General Manager, Harm Mitigation, who oversees ESA's electrical contractor licensing system. "Through the course of our investigation, we discovered significant electrical hazards at one school that could have seriously injured or killed someone, or caused a fire."

The court imposed a fine of $58,750 for Giroux's violations and Medewar was fined $7,500. Both fines include a 25% victim fine surcharge, which is credited to a provincial government fund to assist victims of crime.

Electrical Business Magazine is celebrating its 50th Anniversary this year as the leading publication serving Canada's professional electrical industry. And while EBMag has seen many changes over the years, its mission is to always serve the needs of its readership first and foremost, in harmony with its client advertisers and supporters. "Despite our years in the industry, our readers and advertisers' attention and loyalty are not a birthright," says Anthony Capkun, EBMag's editor of nearly 10 years. "If we don't continue to deliver quality content to push new ideas and initiatives we don't deserve to serve... plain and simple."

The electrical landscape is made up of numerous professionals including contractors, engineers and linemen, manufacturers, distributors and agents, codes and standards professionals, inspectors, associations and more-and no one tries harder than EBMag to bridge the gap between these seemingly disparate entities to create a sense a community.

"It is not enough to merely report on the happenings in our industry from afar, but to be an integral part of our industry... to show our solidarity with electrical professionals everywhere," continues Capkun. "We participate in both major and niche electrical events across Canada and the States, providing on-the-spot coverage, investigating new trends, and networking with key people that shape our industry. This enables us to provide the insights our readers have come to expect."

Founded in May 1964 by J.W. Kerr, Jim Wilson (president of Canada Electric) and James Wilson (president of the Canadian Electrical Contractors Association), Electrical Business Magazine has stayed true to its roots in that it continues to be a family-managed affair; it is owned and operated today by Mike and Sue Fredericks of Annex Business Media-Canada's largest privately owned business media company. What started as a single print publication 50 years ago is today the most multi-faceted Canadian offering for both buyers and specifiers of electrical products and services, and those who offer them.

"When you consider Electrical Business, L'industrie électrique, NETcomm, Energy Manager and Distribution & Supply, all our various newsletters, eBooks and Tweets, and content-rich websites with current news, features, video, etc., it's easy to see why readers and viewers turn to us time and again," notes EBMag's publisher, John MacPherson.

"Electrical Business is more than a magazine: it's an institution. And like the owner of a fine watch, we are not so much EBMag's publishers as we are its caretakers," Capkun points out. "It has been an honour to be part of EB's history and we look forward to many more years to come."

Keep an eye out for the commemorative July 2014 edition of Electrical Business, which will include a special retrospective over the last 50 years. For advertising opportunities, contact Scott Hoy.

ECAA would like to extend special thanks to Anthony Capkun, editor of Electrical Business Magazine for taking time from his busy schedule and joining us at our recent Training Day and Annual General Meetings at Fantasyland Hotel in Edmonton.
